Amidst the unprecedented challenges posed by the COVID-19 pandemic, our college community rallied together, demonstrating unwavering solidarity and compassion towards those in need. Teachers and students alike, driven by a shared sense of responsibility, embarked on a multifaceted journey of support, both formal and informal.

Our college-based clubs, societies, and student groups, including NSS, NCC, and Rovers and Rangers club, emerged as beacons of hope, volunteering their time and efforts in various impactful initiatives. From serving as volunteers at quarantine centers to spearheading fitness campaigns and promoting social awareness through FIT India campaigns, every contribution resonated with the spirit of altruism and service.

A pivotal aspect of our community outreach was the establishment of a COVID-19 task force WhatsApp group, serving as a vital hub for sharing crucial information regarding testing, food distribution, blood donation, medicine availability, vaccination drives, and mask-making initiatives. This real-time exchange of information facilitated swift and targeted responses to emerging needs, ensuring no one was left behind in the face of adversity.

Collaborating closely with AASHA workers, our dedicated volunteers actively participated in vaccination drives, blood donation campaigns, and the distribution of essential supplies to vulnerable communities. Additionally, efforts were directed towards raising awareness through the creation and dissemination of informative posters, as well as providing crucial information to empower individuals to make informed decisions regarding their health and well-being.

As a testament to our collective resolve and compassion, our college community stood shoulder to shoulder with the immediate community, exemplifying the transformative power of solidarity in times of crisis. Together, we navigated through the darkest of times, illuminating the path forward with acts of kindness, empathy, and unwavering support for one another.

Amidst our endeavors to stand with the community during these challenging times, every action was deeply intertwined with a vital performance area aligned with the visionary mission of our college.
